

CDBG

What is CDBG? - Community Development Block Grants are grants provided to larger cities and urban counties by the U. S. Dept. of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) to develop viable communities by providing funds for decent housing, suitable living environments, and opportunities to expand economic opportunities, principally for low- and moderate-income (LMI) households. The City of Greeley annually receives approximately $840,000, 70% of which must be used to the benefit of low- moderate-income households and/or neighborhoods. CDBG is an important tool for helping the City tackle serious challenges facing the community. Greeley has received CDBG funds for more than 30 years.

How has CDBG been used in Greeley?

- Support Greeley non-profits whose mission assists LMI households, including
 - Greeley Transitional House (acquisition of facility, new roof, rehab; housing case management)
 - Guadalupe Community Shelter (acquisition, infrastructure, construction; case management support)
 - Connections for Independent Living (exterior accessibility improvements)
 - Greeley Center for Independence (Rehab Hope Apartments; room addition at Stephens Farm)
 - Weld Food Bank (acquisition, construction of new facility, commercial kitchen)
 - A Woman’s Place (acquisition and rehab)
- Support City efforts to provide infrastructure (ramps, sidewalks, curb, gutter) and other amenities in low-moderate income neighborhoods, including
 - Sunrise Park, Central Greeley, Northeast Greeley, East UNC, 8th Avenue (infrastructure)
 - Kiwanis Park and Rodarte Center improvements
 - Parkway trees in Redevelopment District neighborhoods
- Support affordable housing; Acquisition of blighted properties for redevelopment; incentives available for developers
